Waqf Row: Can't Order 'Blanket' Stay On Law By Parliament When Validity Presumed, Centre Tells SC

NEW DELHI: The Centre on Friday defended the amended Waqf Act in the Supreme Court and opposed any "blanket stay" by the court on a "law having presumption of constitutionality passed by Parliament".

In a preliminary 1,332-page affidavit, the Centre urged the top court to dismiss the pleas challenging the validity of Waqf (Amendment) Act, 2025, pointing out a "mischevious false narrative" surrounding certain provisions.

"While this court would examine these challenges when the cases are heard, a blanket stay (or a partial stay) without being aware of the adverse consequences of such an order in a generality of cases (even on members of the Muslim community itself) were the petitions to be unsuccessful, would be uncalled for, especially in the context of the presumption of validity of such laws," it argued.

The Centre, as a result, urged a bench headed by Chief Justice Sanjiv Khanna, set to hear pleas for passing interim directions on May 5, not to stay the law's provisions.

The government claimed a "shocking increase" of 116 per cent in the waqf properties since 2013

It also opposed the arguments over the necessary registration of "waqf by user" properties till April 8, saying if the provision was interfered with by an interim order, it would amount to "creation of legislative regime by judicial order".

The affidavit rebutted the submissions that Muslims might be in the minority in the Central Waqf Council and state Waqf Boards due to the change in the law.

The law is a "valid and lawful exercise of legislative power", one that strengthens the institution of waqf and aligns it with constitutional principles, and facilitates the wholesome realisation of waqfs in the contemporary era, it argued.

The Centre contended it was settled position in the law that constitutional courts would not stay a statutory provision, either directly or indirectly, and decided the matter

 $\hbox{``There\,is\,a} presumption\,of\,constitutionality$ that applies to laws made by Parliament,"

The affidavit added, "Considering the settled constitutional principles of presumption of constitutionality, intrinsic value behind democratic processes and high threshold to be met before passing any interim orders, it would be in the fitness of things to decline any interim orders as was done in the original petitions."

Referring to the "reported misuse" of waqf provisions to encroach private and government properties, the affidavit said right before even Mughal era, pre-independence era and postindependence era, the total of wagfs created was 18,29,163.896 acre of land.

"Shockingly after 2013, the addition of waqf land is 20,92,072.536 acres," it said.

On the amendment relating to "waqf by user", the Centre said it was "too late in the day for anyone to argue" that though it claims to be a "genuine waqf" it still wasn't registered.

"If the effect of the section saving only registered 'waqf by user' is interfered with either directly or indirectly by any interim order, it will not only defeat the object and provision itself.

it will result in the following anomalies which the order of any court cannot lead to creation of legislative regime by judicial order(and that too an interim order) wherein Parliament has by law, consciously taken it away," it said.

Countering the claims that Muslims would be in minority due to inclusion of non-Muslims in waqf bodies, the Centre said only four non-Muslims of the total 22 could be part of the Central Waqf Council.

"In waqf boards of each state, there is a possibility of maximum three members who can be non-Muslims (if the ex-officio member happens to be a non-Muslim) out of 11 members," it said.

The Centre said when the legislature has enacted a law, presumed to be constitutional, replacing it would be "impermissible".

"Any order in the nature of one sought by the petitioners, would amount to a stay of the amendment act, validly passed by Parliament at an interim state, which is an exercise impermissible within the confines of judicial review envisaged under the Constitution," it said.

By removing major legal issues, the Centre argued, the Act reaffirmed the identification, classification and regulation of waqf property by subjecting it to legal standards and judicial oversight.

The law ensures no person is denied access to courts, and the decisions affecting property rights, religious freedom, and public charity are made within the bounds of fairness and legality, it added.

"Through these changes, the Amendment Act brings judicial accountability, transparency, and fairness," the affidavit said.

The government also denied the argument that the law violated fundamental rights, and said it respected the essential religious practices of the Muslim community by leaving matters of faith and worship untouched, while legitimately regulating the secular, administrative facets of waqf management as authorised by the Constitution.

"Parliament has acted within its domain to ensure that religious endowments like waqf are managed in a manner that upholds the trust reposed in them by the faithful and the society at large, without trespassing on religious autonomy," it said.

On April 17, the Centre assured the top court it would neither denotify wagf properties, including "waqf by user", nor make any appointments to the central waqf council and boards till May 5.

A True Contrary Of Transitory 'I'

(A Tribute to Nasir Ahmad Sofi)

SHOWKAT AHMAD WANI

llah proclaims the virtues and essence of a "Momin" in the Quran: "And those who recoil from the vilest sins and depravities; and who, when fury ignites within them, swiftly pardon" (23:27). Verily, they are the ones who quake with awe and dread before their Lord. They are steadfast in their faith in His Revelations, refusing to entwine partners with their Sovereign. They pour forth their wealth in Allah's path with open hands, yet their hearts tremble, fearing their offerings might falter before their Lord's judgment (lest they be cast aside). These souls race toward righteousness, amassing good deeds, and they outstrip all others in this sacred chase (23:57-61). The Prophet Muhammad ( ) declared, "The world is a dungeon for the believer and a lavish Eden for the heed-

Humanity now reels beneath a torrent of crises, stripping away the divine raiment bestowed by God-once crowning us as the pinnacle of creation—only to embrace the base existence of a mere beast.

Present man exhausts his toil and talents chasing transitory cravings, crowning material riches as the supreme and solitary prize of life. For centuries, the relentless quest of all has been to carve out a blissful, solitary identity. Thus, we sought to bind our essence to the "Self" and the "Social", yet both unions have plunged into an abyss of ruin. We dwell amidst a tempest of crises—the crisis of existence and the crisis of love and kinship. If joy hinges on "I," then "We" becomes a hollow falsehood; if bliss resides in "We," then "I" loses all true weight. To deny the pulse of "I" is a terror in its rawest form, while "We" stirs as a fragile, deceptive mirage. In truth, "I" and "We" diverge only faintly, each nesting within a single soul.

In our mystical tradition, there are those whose every fiber, from the first spark, is irresistibly drawn to the Absolute. They surrender the ephemeral treasures of their own self, dissolving into "Him" by spurning the ephemeral, subjective "I" to grasp the eternal "I." Even now, rare souls embody the rapture of "Jazb-divine attraction-while clinging fiercely to the sacred rites and their unyielding core. Among them was Nasir Ahmad Sofi, a luminary from my native soil.

This is no mere elegy, no Amitow Ghosh crafting a tribute to Aga Shahid Ali after his passing. It is a keener, truer testament—a piercing glimpse into Nasir's inner "anfoss", a captivating study of the ultimate enigma, radiant with allure.

Nasir Ahmad Sofi resided in Kaloosa Bandipora until his earthly tenure concluded on May 10, 2024. For over two decades, we improved to an indelible camaraderie, an alliance of souls. His existence was imbued with a profound spiritual inclination, outwardly unassuming yet intricately woven with the threads of philosophical and metaphysical profundity.

Nasir Ahmad Sofi burned with an unrelenting passion for Rumi's Fana, a fierce mystical creed that demands the ego's obliteration in a torrid plunge into divine unity. An impassable ideological abyss tore us apart in our quest for transcendent truth. I stood as an indomitable adversary, wielding Iqbal's Khudi—the ironclad doctrine of self-forging as the supreme conquest of human existence. Our convictions, like clashing titans, carved irreconcilable paths through the crucible of our

The audacious doctrine of Khudi (selfhood), presented by Allama Muhammad Iqbal, and the transcendent vision of Fana (annihilation), proclaimed by Jalaluddin Rumi, clash as titanic philosophical and spiritual edifices within Islamic thought. Anchored in the incandescent depths of obliteration of ego, consumed in the rapturous inferno of the Divine. ence to divine edicts. Their doctrines, though entwined in mystic heritage, ignite fiercely distinct revelations of the self's core, its sacred bond with the Absolute, and the relentless odyssey to spiritual apotheosis.

Khudi is Iqbal's cataclysmic doctrine of the self—a blazing, indomitable essence, a divine ember within the soul that surges toward transcendent self-mastery and cosmic dominion.

Iqbal's Khudi commands the forging of an invincible, singular self, a titanic creative force unleashed through unrelenting self-awareness, adamantine discipline, and ferocious action. It scorns petty egoism, exalting instead the apotheosis of one's sacred destiny.

Anchored in Iqbal's audacious refuge of Islamic truth, Khudi springs from the Quranic mandate of human sovereignty, duty, and the exalted mantle of God's viceroys (khalifa) on Earth. Fused with the searing intellect of Nietzsche and Bergson, Iqbal transmogrifies their thought into an unyielding Islamic crucible. It summons the creation of an unbreakable, sovereign self, fused with divine purpose, to drive the universe's ascent through fearless creativity, unstoppable action, and relentless moral conquest.

"O you who believe, fear Allah with the fear due to Him, and do not die except in a state of submission to Him." [Al-Imran: 102]

Sofi lived in perpetual awe of Allah's omniscience, his every deed saturated with divine mindfulness. He not only eschewed sin but recoiled from the faintest shadow of ambiguity. His taqwa blazed in his unassailable integrity, scrupulous trustworthiness, and boundless compassion. He disciplined his tongue, veiled his gaze, and fortified his heart, ever cognizant of Allah's vigilant gaze. The Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) proclaimed:

"Taqwa resides here," gesturing to his heart. [Sahih Muslim] This divine fear armed Sofi with indomitable fortitude, enabling him to confront tribulations with stoic patience and fervent gratitude. He surrendered his will to Allah's decree, anchoring every choice in the immutable laws of Shariah. Tasawwuf was Sofi's sacred crucible, where he forged an ineffable bond with the Divine. Far beyond rote rituals, he embraced tasawwuf riches and the pursuit of decadence. He pared his needs to the barest minimum, channelling his resources into Allah's path with unstinting generosity. The Prophet's (peace be upon him) life of ascetic nobility was his lodestar, a model of unparalleled simplicity. The Prophet (peace be upon him) taught:

"Zuhd is not to forbid the permissible, but to place greater trust in what lies in Allah's hands than in your own." [Tirmidhi]

Sofi's zuhd was a bulwark against avarice and greed. He epitomized selflessness, deriving profound fulfilment in uplifting others, his heart untainted by the ephemeral seductions of this world.

The philosophy of fana crowned Sofi's spiritual odyssey, where he dissolved his very being into the ocean of Allah's will. The Quran commands: "Say, 'My prayer, my sacrifice, my life, and my death are for Allah, Lord of all worlds." [Al-An'am: 162] Sofi enshrined this verse as his life's credo. He obliterated ego, pride, and selfhood, prostrating his soul before Allah's sovereign decree. His fana exalted him to a realm where he embraced every divine dispensation—be it bliss or affliction, prosperity or adversity—with serene submission. The Prophet (peace be upon him) affirmed:

"Whoever lives for Allah, Allah becomes his sufficiency." [Sahih Bukhari] This philosophy of annihilation emancipated Sofi from worldly shackles, endowing his heart with celestial tranquillity. He knew his true destiny lay in attaining Allah's pleasure and the everlasting bliss of Paradise.

Sofi's life was a majestic tapestry, interwoven with the resplendent threads of taqwa, tasawwuf, zuhd, and fana. Guided by the luminous Quran and Sunnah, he transformed every moment into an act of worship, a relentless pursuit of divine favour. His legacy endures as a towering exemplar, illuminating how one may dwell in this fleeting world while anchoring the soul in eternity. Sofi's life proclaims that ultimate triumph lies in unyielding devotion to Allah, a heart cleansed of impurity, renunciation of worldly vanities, and the sublime dissolution of self in the Divine.

"Allah is pleased with them, and they are pleased with Him." [Al-Ma'ida: 1191

Thus was Sofi's sanctified existence—a luminous paradigm for every believer yearning for divine proximity.

In gloom profound, where quiet reigns, My soul for Sofi fiercely yearns. A year estranged, the anguish surges, For love so pure, now lost to urges. Your mirth resounds within my core, A priceless gem, I failed to store. Though distance severs, my heart's outcry, In every line, my love defies.

- Thy parting cast the lanes of joy to shade,
- Where laughter waned and sorrow claimed the dark. The stars that once had sung of light and peace
- Now shiver cold and tremble in the void.
- The morning wind, now heavy-laden, sighs,
- And bears the breath of death upon its wings. The rising sun, no longer soft with gold,
- Now lifts its crown in flames that burn the sky.
- The rain descends in solitary grief,
- And every drop resounds with loss and woe. When misery unchains its iron weight,
- I writhe within the fire of joy and pain.
- I bid my weary eyes to close in dream, That I might see thee near, if only there.
- But sorrow's watchful sentinels remain,
- And guard the gates that keep me far from thee. The storm within my gaze returns to me,
- And leads me back to halls of endless dusk.
- The fortress waits in silence, cold and vast, Where echoes call thy name and fade unheard.
- When winter's breath beats soft upon the door,
- Or winds disturb the heavy-curtained gloom, A flicker stirs, as if thou standest near,
- Yet only air and silence fill the space. Then all the walls lean inward, waiting still,
- The marble hushed, attuned to welcome thee.
- But thou, unseen, unbidden, dost not come,
- Nor tread upon the stones that call thy name.

Rumi's Fana signifies the profound obliteration of the ego in the as the alchemy of heart purification and the quest for Allah's love. The divine presence, a mystical surrender where the self dissolves to unite with the Supreme. It embodies the complete relinquishment of individuality, an ecstatic annihilation where the self merges wholly with the Divine Essence, transcending all personal boundaries. Rooted in Sufi mysticism, Rumi's Fana draws from Quranic principles of divine return and Prophetic traditions of spiritual cleansing, echoing the radical self-dissolution championed by Sufi luminaries like Al-Hallaj and Attar in their pursuit of divine love. Its ultimate aim is Baqa, the eternal subsistence in God, where the ego's annihilation ushers in a perpetual state of divine unity, immersed in boundless love and ultimate truth.

Nasir Amad Sofi, a transcendent archetype of piety, sculpted his existence in unwavering fidelity to the Quran and Sunnah, embodying the sublime virtues of tagwa (God-consciousness), tasawwuf (spiritual transcendence), zuhd (worldly renunciation), and fana (self-annihilation in Allah). His life was a radiant beacon, illuminating the path of divine Sufism and Islamic metaphysics, these luminaries carve irreconcilable communion, emancipation from material fetters, and relentless pursuit paths. Iqbal's Khudi exalts the indomitable self, a blazing force ascending toward divine sovereignty, while Rumi's Fana demands the utter life through these four pillars, each a testament to his resolute adher-

"Those who strive in Our cause—We will surely guide them to Our paths." [Al-Ankabut: 69]

Sofi waged an unrelenting jihad against his baser self, deeming it the paramount struggle. Through ceaseless dhikr (divine remembrance), profound meditation, and soul-stirring Quranic recitation, he bathed his heart in celestial light. In the hallowed stillness of the night's final hours, he stood in Tahajjud, beseeching forgiveness for his frailties. The Prophet (peace be upon him) declared:

"The most exalted means of nearing Allah is the Tahajjud prayer."

Sofi's tasawwuf unshackled him from worldly chains, enthroning Allah's love as the sovereign of his soul. Guided by his spiritual mentor, he pursued tazkiya (soul purification), vigilantly purging his heart of hubris, envy, and rancour with every breath.

Zuhd suffused Sofi's life with a resolute disdain for transient worldly gains. He perceived wealth, fame, and pleasures as fleeting mirages, fixing his gaze on the eternal horizon of the Hereafter. The Ouran admonishes:

"The life of this world is but the enjoyment of delusion." [Al-Imran: 185] Sofi embraced an austere existence, scorning the accumulation of

Crying mountains, bleeding stones

Danish Ashraf Khan

When Kashmir's valleys found their voice, They shared their grief—they had no choice. On stones so still, their stories stayed, Of all the storms we faced, betrayed.

Beneath the snow, our pain was deep, In every flake, a tale would weep. They burned our dreams to ash and dust, But still we chose to love, not fuss.

Our wounds were wide, they never healed, But still, no guiltless life we sealed. They called us names, they gave us shame, Yet still we played no hateful game.

In Pahalgam, the silence cried, And pain lived deep where hope once died. We held our tears, we bore the strain, With quiet hearts and silent pain.

We stood with truth, with strength, with grace, But hurt the most by our own face. Now every step feels lost, unsure, Each gaze is heavy, hard to cure.

Why did our own forget what's right, And steal our dreams, our peaceful night? We won't give in, we will not fall— We live for truth, we've given all.

Kashmir is pure, its soul is kind, Don't link it with a hateful mind. Though we have scars from days gone past, We still believe that peace will last.

Don't darken Kashmir's gentle name, Don't set our tears alight with blame. We only asked for calm, for peace— So let this blame and battle cease.

PART II

The Soul Of Kashmir: Toward A Transformative Encounter

SHABEER AHMAD LONE

o truly encounter Kashmir is to offer yourself wholly-mind, heart, and spirit-to its sacred and natural presences. Baba Reshi, Payamuddin Reshi, Baba Shukruddin Reshi, Makhdoom Sahib, Charare-Sharief, Sheikh Hamza Makhdoom, the ancient Martand temple in Anantnag, the mysterious caves of Kalaroos in Kupwara-all these are not merely structures but living thresholds into silence, surrender, and sanctity. The Mughal gardens-Nishat, Shalimar, Achabal-flow like verses of paradise, while Dal Lake and Wullar Lake reflect the eternal in their stillness. Jhelum and Sindh rivers carry ancestral memory, and the alpine meadows of Bangus, Doodhpathri, Tosamaidan, and Gulmarg breathe freedom into the soul. The highland pastures of Lidder Valley,

From the grandeur of Martand Sun Temple to the grace of Sufi shrines like Baba Reshi, Makhdoom Sahib, and Charar-e-Sharief, every structure breathes devotion. Wooden mosques like Jamia Masjid and Khanqah of Shah Hamdan blend Persian, Central Asian, and local aesthetics, with intricate carvings and sacred geometry. Mughal gardens-Nishat, Shalimar, Chashme Shahitranslate paradise into space, where water, symmetry, and silence speak. Crafts like papier-māché, walnut carving, and Pashmina weaving echo the valley's soul. In Kashmir, art is remembrance in pigment and pattern in wool and architecture is prayer in stone and wood. However concerned certainly need guided interventions/empowerment by state and central governments to sustain and flourish localy and globaly.

Kashmir's spiritual and cultural legacy is vividly voiced by scholars who illuminate its plural soul. Prof. Mohammad Ishaq Khan revealed the Rishi-Sufi synthesis as a lived moral tradition of interfaith harmony. Dr. Abdul Qayoom Rafiqi interpreted sacred architecture as contemplative spaces of shared heritage. Dr. Nyla Ali Khan emphasized memory and inclusive identity as keys to reclaiming Kashmir's plural past. Prof. Shafi Shauq upheld Kashmiri language and poetics as vessels of metaphysical depth. Zareef Ahmad Zareef preserved folk spirituality through verse and oral tradition. Prof. Fida Mohammad Hassnain envisioned from its suffering-rather, the two interpenetrate to form a unique aesthetic of poignancy.

This transformation echoes globally. Indigenous philosophies from Maori to Navajo traditions emphasize that land is not ownedit is kin. In Buddhist epistemology, the concept of inter-being (coined by Thich Nhat Hanh) implies that we do not simply live in a place-we live with it, as it lives through us. In the Christian mystical tradition, Thomas Merton noted that "the geographical place becomes a sacrament of the interior journey." Kashmir, in this sacred cartography, is not a destination but a mirror. It reflects, refracts, and reshapes the soul of the one who dares to behold it with reverence.

And yet, in our contemporary obsession with collecting experiences-be they Instagrammable moments, curated itineraries, or bucket-list conquests-falls short of the ethical and existential engagement Kashmir calls for. The valley does not reward the hurried visitor. It opens itself only to the one who arrives empty of ego and full of wonder, who listens without demanding, who gazes without conquering. To be changed by Kashmir is to learn a new and deeper grammar of being-where presence matters more than possession, and resonance outlasts record. As Iqbal profoundly reminds us:

Kashmir's art and architecture are where spirit meets form. From the grandeur of Martand Sun Temple to the grace of Sufi shrines like Baba Reshi, Makhdoom Sahib, and Charar-e-Sharief, every structure breathes devotion. Wooden mosques like Jamia Masjid and Khangah of Shah Hamdan blend Persian, Central Asian, and local aesthetics, with intricate carvings and sacred geometry. Mughal gardens-Nishat, Shalimar, Chashme Shahi-translate paradise into space, where water, symmetry, and silence speak. Crafts like papiermâché, walnut carving, and Pashmina weaving echo the valley's soul. In Kashmir, art is remembrance in pigment and pattern in wool and architecture is prayer in stone and wood. However concerned certainly need guided interventions/ empowerment by state and central governments to sustain and flourish localy Lolab, and Gurez whisper ancient prayers in the wind. To walk among them is not to collect experiences but to let them dissolve the boundaries of self. Let the land, the shrines, the waters read you. Let Kashmir transform the way you experience yourself.

Yet to receive the gift of Kashmir's spirit is also to acknowledge the gravity of its grief. The land's beauty, so achingly sublime, exists not apart from its sorrow but within it. The scars of conflict, the silence of loss, the fractured narratives of exile, migration, and memory-these are not marginal details but integral to its identity. To engage with Kashmir deeply is not to bypass its pain but to bear witness with humility and attentiveness. Political instability, disrupted education in earlier times, and intergenerational trauma echo through the streets and the quietude of the valley alike. Still, even in this crucible of suffering, the dignity of life, the poetry of resistance, and the resilience of daily existence shine with luminous clarity. Kashmir teaches not merely through what it offers, but through what it endures. Its beauty is not separate from its sorrow-they interpenetrate, giving rise to a poignant aesthetic that both breaks and blesses the heart.

From this confluence of splender and sorrow emerges art in Kashmir, thus, offerring transcendence through form. The pashmina weaver, the papier-mache artist, the namda embroiderer, the calligrapher-all participate in a tradition that is not merely economic or decorative but sacred. These are not crafts but meditations. They embody what Islamic aesthetics call ihsanbeauty aligned with excellence, skill infused with sincerity. As Hamid Dabashi and Seyyed Hossein Nasr have noted, Islamic art is not representational but participatory; it reveals rather than depicts. Kashmiri artistry, then, is a metaphysical act, an invocation, a quiet act of rememberance. To observe it patiently is to be inducted into a way of seeing that transforms the observer and sanctifies the seen.

Kashmir's art and architecture are where spirit meets form.

Kashmir as a mystical confluence-a "spiritual university where sages, seekers and storytellers converge. "Remembering the Unforgettable: Kashmir as She made me" as deep nostalgic gem-like reollection in "Kashmir" book stand as moral bulwark against magritarian simplifications. His humanistic critique defends Kashmir's syncretic ethos and cultural autonomy and unwavering clearity and his tribute poems like Mauj Kashir/My Bulbul Calls/Lal-Ded/Retrirving The Lost Paradise/Raj Begum/ Joan Baez/ etc in "Stout and Tender" poetic collection by Prof. Badri Raina all shimmering with affection and ritical depth.

It is Mridu Rai's inclusive and interdisciplinary scholarship weaves history, law, theology, and politics in "Hindu Rulers, Muslim Subjects" into a profoundly enlightening account of Kashmir's enduring struggle for dignity and self-definition. Mridu Rai unveils how Dogra rule, sanctified by Hindu ritual and colonial law, politically marginalized Kashmir's Muslim majority. She shows how religion became a mechanism of control, not identity, exposing the deep roots of disenfranchisement and the historical construction of rights and resistance. Together, these voices affirm that Kashmir is not a periphery but a sanctuary of spirit, beauty and coexistence -a civilizational memory resisting the violence of forgetting.

However, Kashmir cannot be known without acknowledging its wounds. The scars of conflict, the silence of loss, the fractured narratives of exile, migration, and memory-these are integral to its identity. To engage with Kashmir deeply is not to bypass its pain but to bear witness with humility and attentiveness. Political instability, disrupted education, and intergenerational trauma echo through the streets and silence of the valley. Yet, even within this crucible of suffering, the dignity of life, the poetry of resistance, and the resilience of everyday living shine with luminous clarity. Kashmir teaches not merely through what it offers, but through what it endures. Its beauty is not divorced

"This is the mark of living nations through time, That their destinies shift with each dawn and dusk." "In the soil whose conscience carries the fire of the chinar, It is impossible for that earth to ever grow cold or desolate."

In the final reckoning, to encounter Kashmir deeply is to accept a kind of initiation-an aesthetic, ethical, and ontological transformation. Kashmir is not a souvenir, a landscape to be domesticated through photographs, or a conflict to be politicized from afar. It is a presence that reveals more about the observer than itself; a mirror that demands stillness, humility, and surrender. As historians like Chitralekha Zutshi and travelers like Walter Lawrence have shown, the region has long resisted reductive narratives and instead offered itself as an evolving palimpsest of cultures, faiths, and identities. Its Sufi shrines and Shaivite texts, its Buddhist relics and Mughal gardens, its embroidered shawls and resilient poetry all invite us to inhabit a consciousness that is plural, wounded, luminous, and alert. The soul of Kashmir is best known not by adding it to one's list of places visited but by allowing it to reform the structure of one's perception, values, and awareness. In Kashmir, beauty and sorrow walk hand in hand, and only those willing to walk beside both can hope to know its truth. In Kashmir, beauty and sorrow walk hand in hand, and only those willing to walk beside both can hope to know its truth. To be deep with Kashmir, then, is to learn to be deep with oneself, with history, with the sacred, and with the ineffable to truely sustain and flourish across..

condemn the Pahalgam terror incident, mourn the loss of 26 innocent lives, and extend our heartfelt condolences to the bereaved families."

He noted the pain of meeting the victims' families—many of whom were visiting Kashmir on their honeymoon or family vacation. "As the Tourism Minister myself, I found it extremely difficult to meet their families. I was at a loss for words," he added.

Highlighting the collective outrage and unity across the Valley in the wake of the attack, Omar Abdullah said this unified response sends a powerful, silent message to those who seek to sow fear and division.

He commended the business community for taking a principled stand, saying, "You've clearly said this act was not in our name—neither have we ever supported such violence, nor will we ever in the future."

The Chief Minister assured that all constructive suggestions offered during the meeting would be seriously considered to help prevent the recurrence of such incidents.

Addressing concerns regarding harassment faced by Kashmiri students and traders outside Kashmir, he informed the gathering that he had spoken directly with the Union Home Minister, who assured him of necessary protective measures. An advisory will be issued in this regard, and the Home Minister has also personally reached out to several state Chief Ministers. Omar Abdullah said that he too has spoken to his counterparts in other states to ensure the safety of Kashmiris across India.

He lauded the tourism and business stakeholders for not focusing on financial losses or seeking compensation, saying, "Business will come and go. Right now, our primary concern is to express our grief and stand in solidarity with those affected by this senseless attack."

He added that discussions on economic impact can take place later, once the immediate pain of the tragedy has been addressed.

Referring to the two-minute silence observed at Jamia Masjid Srinagar earlier today, the Chief Minister called it "a strong and dignified response" to the propaganda peddled by some news channels against Kashmiris.

He paid special tribute to Syed Adil Hussain, a local who lost his life while trying to save tourists during the attack, calling him a "symbol of Kashmiri hospitality." Omar Abdullah assured that his government would take steps to honour his memory and support his family.

Speaking on the occasion, Advisor to the Chief Minister Nasir Aslam Wani said, "This incident has shaken us to the core." He appreciated the people of Kashmir for rising in protest against the attack and sending a clear message across the country and the world that "this act has no place in our society or our religion."

Earlier, stakeholders from the tourism sector unanimously condemned the attack, calling it a "murder of humanity." They emphasized that the Valley is in deep mourning and that commercial concerns are secondary at this time.

They proposed several measures, including: formation of a coordination committee comprising administration, security agencies, and tourism stakeholders; protection and welfare of Kashmiri students and businesspersons outside Kashmir.

Besides, they suggested the Establishment of Quick Response Teams (QRTs) at key tourist destinations and countering misinformation and biased media narratives.

The Chairman of Raja & Rani Tour and Travels informed the gathering that the Maharashtra Tour and Travel Operators' Association has pledged to adopt Syed Adil Hussain's family.

The association will support the educational needs of his children and provide long-term assistance to his family.

Furthermore, the association has decided that no tour bookings to Kashmir will be cancelled, in a strong show of support and solidarity.

Chief Minister also discussed assurances received from the Union Home Minister Amit Shah regarding the safety of J-K residents in other states.

"It is regrettable that this attack took place and we ensured that whatever issues that were kept in front of us in the meeting, we will work on them. During this meeting, I spoke with the Union Home Minister and he assured me that all steps will be taken to ensure the safety of the people of J-K who are staying in other states...An advisory will be issued by the Home Ministry and the Union Minister also spoke with the Chief Ministers of many states," he added.

Meanwhile, Union Home Minister Amit Shah will hold a meeting regarding the Indus Water Treaty at his residence in the national capital on Friday evening.

Besides the Home Minister and the Union Minister for Jal Shakti, CR Paatil, other senior government officials will attend this meeting.

Sources told ANI, "India has formally notified Pakistan in writing about the suspension of the Indus Water Treaty."

Debashree Mukherjee, Secretary, Ministry of Jal Shakti, as informed the Secretary of Pakistan's Ministry of Water Resources, Syed Ali Murtaza, about this decision of the Indian government through a letter. India has issued a notice for changes in the treaty. The letter states that the Indian government has given notice to the Pakistani government for amendments to the treaty.

This decision was made at a meeting of the Cabinet Committee on Security (CCS) held on April 23, chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, and attended by Home Minister Amit Shah, Defence Minister Rajnath Singh, and External Affairs Minister Jaishankar.

This comes after terrorists attacked tourists at Baisaran meadow in Pahalgam on April 22, killing 25 Indian nationals and one Nepali citizen while leaving several others injured.

The letter stated that India has sent notices to the Pakistani government seeking modification of the Indus Waters Treaty of 1960 (the Treaty) under Article XII (3) of the Treaty.

"These communications cited fundamental changes in the circumstances that have taken place since the Treaty was executed that require a reassessment of obligations under the various Articles of the Treaty read with its Annexures," the letter said.

"These changes include significantly altered population demographics, the need to accelerate the development of clean energy and other changes in the assumptions underlying the sharing of waters under the Treaty," it added.

The Indian government has taken a significant step following the terrorist attack in Pahalgam, Jammu and Kashmir.

On the fallout of the Pahalgam attack on tourism in Kashmir, Choudhary said, "We did not want the tourists to leave in the aftermath of the Pahalgam attack. We wanted the tourists to complete their tour which they had planned.

"However, we have provided all possible assistance to the tourists who wanted to return. At the same time we have asked people to tell their governments to ensure the safety of people of Jammu and Kashmir who are studying or working in their states because an ordinary Kashmiri has no role in these incidents," he said.

On the role of Pakistan in terror activities in Jammu and Kashmir, the deputy chief minister said Islamabad will have to introspect why fingers are always pointed at it whenever anything goes wrong.

"Pakistan will have to understand why the blame is always pointed at it. Why is no other country named in such incidents? Pakistan may deny as much as they want but it is a fact that the roots of terrorism are there," he added.

Twenty-six people, mostly tourists, were killed and several injured when terrorists opened fire at a meadow near the popular tourist town of Pahalgam in Anantnag district on Tuesday afternoon.

3 Persons Including 2 Navy Personnel Held For Extorting Money From Agniveer Aspirants

BHUBANESWAR: Odisha Police arrested three persons including two serving Navy personnel in Khurda district, on the charge of extorting money from Agniveer aspirants during a recruitment drive in November 2024, an officer said on Friday.

The arrested persons were identified as Satyam Chahar, currently working at INS Kesari, Andaman and Nicobar, Vinay Kumar Ray, presently posted at INS Chilika and retired Navy official Bhoosan, a resident of Uttar Pradesh, the officer said.

The trio were arrested based on a complaint lodged by Lieutenant Commander Adwitiya Singh, a training correspondence officer at INS Chilka, at Balugaon police station on April 19. The case was registered under charges of cheating and extortion.

Khurda SP Sagarika Nath said that the arrested trio was accused of extorting a huge amount of money from Agniveer aspirants by promising them assistance in police verification, physical examination, and securing a job.

"We have arrested three people and in search of two others allegedly involved in the scam. Hope to nab the remaining two soon," Nath told PTI, adding that the police have informed the Navy to verify whether any candidate fraudulently got into Agniveer.

The SP said police have seized several transaction proofs and bank documents during the course of their investigation. "Preliminary investigation revealed that the accused had been collecting huge money from job seekers with false promises of getting them employment in the Navy. Further investigation is in progress to ascertain the exact network of the scam.

She said police have also seized some transaction proofs and bank documents during the course of their investigation.

"As per intelligence inputs, two more persons are suspected to be involved in the racket. Police have so far frozen 12 bank accounts linked to the fraudulent activities," the SP said. (AGENCIES)

Canadians put off by Trump's bluster, border arrests booking far fewer US visits

VANCOUVER: Diana and Rick Bellamy initially planned to take a Caribbean cruise out of Houston before heading to Laurel, Mississippi, to visit the home of one of their favourite HGTV shows, "Home Town."

The Calgary couple scrapped those plans and vacationed last month along Mexico's Pacific coast instead, put off by US President Donald Trump's trade war with Canada, the insults he's hurled at their homeland, and stories about American border agents searching people's phones and detaining foreigners for minor reasons.

She found it ironic that she felt more comfortable travelling to Mexico than the US.

"I never thought I would hear myself say that," Diane Bellamy said.

Trump's attacks on Canada's economy and threats to make it the 51st state have infuriated Canadians, who are cancelling trips to the US in big numbers. They also seem to have also flipped the narrative heading into Canada's parliamentary elections on #### Monday, with Prime Minister Mark Carney's Liberal Party surging after trailing far behind in the polls just a few months ago. A steep decline

The US gets more visitors from Canada each year than from any other country, according to the US Travel Association, an industry trade group, which said the 20.4 million visits from Canada last year generated USD 20.5 billion in spending.

But there has been a big drop in foreigners travelling to the US since Trump took office, and Canadians are no exception. There were more than 910,000 fewer land border crossings from Canada into the US last month than in March of 2024 – a more than 22 per cent drop – according to US Customs and Border Protection data.

An Air Canada spokesman, meanwhile, said Canada-US flight bookings for April through September are down about 10 per cent.

Trump brushed aside the decline in tourism to the United States on Wednesday, saying, "There's a little nationalism there I guess, perhaps. It's not a big deal."

Traveller worries

Since Trump started his second term, there have been well-publicised reports of tourists being stopped at US border crossings and held for weeks at immigration detention facilities before being allowed to fly home at their own expense.

On March 3, Canadian Jasmine Mooney, an actor and entrepreneur on a US work visa, was detained by US border agents in San Diego. She was released after 12 days detention.

Before Mooney's release, British Columbia Premier David Eby expressed concern, saying: "It certainly reinforces anxiety that ... many Canadians have about our relationship with the US right now, and the unpredictability of this administration and its actions."

The Canadian Association of University Teachers, which represents faculty and staff at Canadian universities, warned its members against nonessential travel to the US due to the "political landscape" under Trump and reports of Canadians encountering difficulties crossing the border.

Academics who have expressed negative views about the Trump administration should be particularly cautious about travelling to the US, said the group.

"People are scared to cross the border. I don't know what Americans are thinking, quite frankly. Are they that oblivious?" said former Quebec Premier Jean Charest, who has family in Florida.

Mike Sauer, who runs a community policing centre in Vancouver, said he and his partner have no interest in travelling to the US now because of Trump's politics and border fears. One of Sauer's concerns is that if a border guard were to check his cellphone, the guard might see his past purchases of marijuana, which is legal to buy in Canada and about half the 50 states but is still illegal under US federal law.

"The States have a different view on drugs. They could certainly look at my phone and see I'm 420-friendly," he said, meaning he's marijuanafriendly. "I think it kind of depends on which border guard would have a problem with that and which ones wouldn't."

Dietra Wilson, 32, said when she was younger, she often visited Detroit, which is just across the border from Windsor, Ontario, where she and her husband, Ben, own a secondhand shop. She hasn't visited much in recent years, though, and she said she's heard of people's worries about crossing the border since Trump moved backinto the White House.

"It's worrisome," she said. Ben Wilson, 37, also has qualms about trying

"Why would I want to?" he said. "Regardless of the tariffs, if I'm going to be stopped at the border for my phone or something somebody texted me, why go?"

Industry worriesThe drop in Canadian tourism to the US led California Gov. Gavin Newsom, a frequent target of Trump, to announce an ad campaign this month meant to lure Canadians back to his state, citing a 12 per cent year-on-year drop in February.

McKenzie McMillan, a consultant with a Vancouver-based travel agency, The Travel Group, said the company's bookings to the US have dried up. "We have seen a near-total collapse of US business," he said. "Probably about a 90 per cent drop since February."

Lesley Keyter, the CEO and founder of the Travel Lady agency in Calgary, said she's seen people actually forfeit money to cancel their US trips. "Even if they're going on a Caribbean cruise, they don't want to go down to Fort Lauderdale to get on the cruise ship," she said.

'Terror-Enabling' Remarks: Petition demands dismissal of Aga Ruhullah Mehdi from Lok Sabha

SRINAGAR: A group of concerned citizens from the Srinagar Parliamentary Constituency has filed a petition calling for the disqualification of their Member of Parliament, Aga Ruhullah Mehdi.

The petition, addressed to the Speaker of the Lok Sabha, the Election Commission of India, and the Director General of Police, Jammu & Kashmir, alleges that Mehdi's recent remarks in a televised interview have contributed to a dangerous ideological environment that may have emboldened extremist violence, including the recent massacre in Pahalgam.

The petition comes in the wake of the tragic Pahalgam attack on April 22, where 26 innocent tourists were brutally killed by terrorists. In a chilling justification issued after the attack, the TRF claimed the act was in response to what they termed a "demographic onslaught" and "cultural invasion" in Jammu and Kashmir.

In a recent interview, Mehdi had described the growing influx of tourists and new settlers into Kashmir not as development, but as a deliberate "cultural invasion." He claimed that a "particular set of people" were being brought in "by design" to disturb the cultural environment of the region. Further, he alleged that the RSS was behind a broader strategy aimed at erasing Kashmiri Muslim identity, drawing comparisons with past events in Punjab.

According to the petitioners, such statements do not merely represent political dissent but amount to an ideological prelude that aligns disturbingly with the narratives of terrorist outfits. They argue that Mehdi's words have the effect of legitimizing extremist views and providing indirect justification for acts of terror under the guise of cultural preservation. The petition emphasizes that while the freedom of speech is fundamental, it cannot be used as a shield for speech that enables or rationalizes violence.

Citing constitutional provisions, the petition appeals for Mehdi's disqualification from the Lok Sabha, claiming he has violated the spirit of his oath and undermined national sovereignty. It also urges the Election Commission to examine whether his remarks breach electoral laws by promoting enmity and divisiveness, and requests the police to investigate any links between his statements and the terror attack, potentially invoking provisions under the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (UAPA).

The signatories describe this petition as a civic duty in defense of democracy and peace. They express deep concern that when elected representatives use their platforms to echo the justifications of terrorists, they blur the line between political speech and ideological provocation.

There has been no official response from Aga Ruhullah Mehdi at the time of this report, but the petition is expected to spark significant debate across political and civil society circles.

locality of Baghander Humhama isfast becoming a hub of lawlessness, as illegal construction activities gain momentum right under the nose of the Srinagar Municipal Corporation (SMC). Despite the area being officially notified by the Town Planning Division with a strict ban on new constructions, several violations have recently surfaced—raising serious questions about the enforcement of municipal laws.

According to local residents, one of the most glaring violations involves the construction of a massive 16-foot-high boundary wall. The wall not only lacks proper permissions but also directly contravenes the SMC's own boundary wall byelaws, which prescribe a maximum height of 2.1 metres. Moreover the ground level is also being raised far more than the prescribed limit of 0.3 mtrs from the nearest street level.

The situation worsened when, following a brief and symbolic intervention by the SMC—where a few bricks were removed—the construction resumed with renewed speed and audacity. "It appears the action taken was nothing more than a formality and now the wall is being built like a fortress," a concerned resident told this reporter on condition of anonymity.

Locals allege that the token demolition was staged to give an illusion of enforcement, only to later allow the illegal activity to continue unhindered.

Adding insult to injury, the offender has also caused extensive damage to the adjoining roads by using heavy machinery like dumpers for unlawful land fillings. The unchecked movement of such equipment has not only deteriorated public infrastructure but also sparked fears of further environmental and structural degradation in the area. Residents are now urging the

SMC Commissioner to take urgent and effective action to restore faith in the rule of law. They demand that the boundary

They demand that the boundary wall be immediately reduced to legal height and that all land-filling activity be halted to prevent further destruction.

Hazlewood is great under pressure in any format of the game: RCB head coach Andy Flower

oyal Challengers Bengaluru's
Josh Hazlewood is a world-class bowler who can soak in the pressure in any format of the game and knows what delivery has to bowl at a particular moment, said head coach Andy Flower after the IPL side defeated Rajasthan Royals by 11 runs here.

RCB notched their first win in four games at home to rise to the No. 3 spot on the points table, with Hazlewood's death-overs bowling making a huge impact.

The Australian took four wickets and gave away only seven runs in his last two overs to return figures of 4-0-33-4 as RCB recorded their sixth win in nine matches.

"I would probably refer to both of his last overs because his two overs went for seven runs and he took three wickets in them. Both those overs showed the class of the guy," Flower told the media after the match.

"He's a class operator, he's a world-class bowler, he is great under pressure in any format of the game. I know he's known for his heavy length bowling but he's got some great all-round skills.

"He mixes in those yorkers, wide yorkers, slower balls and he seems to know what type of ball to bowl at the right time," he added.

Flower said the quality three-pronged pace attack was one of RCB's biggest assets. RCB.

"Ithought Bhuvi's (Bhuvneshwar Kumar) been superb this season and Yash (Dayal) was outstanding again today (Thursday), that last over. He showed outstanding skill and composure under pressure to repeatedly bowl yorkers like that," Flower said.

"Ithink those three quicks have been great for us so far this season. I've got some more work to do, obviously, to help us in this last third of the league matches and Hazlewood certainly leads from the front in that regard," he said.

Flower said RCB must build on this win at Rajasthan Royals' Sandeep Sharma acknowledged his side has not been able to respond well in "crunch moments", leading to seven losses in nine games.

"I won't say it is going wrong but we are not able to catch the crunch moments in a match, be it while chasing or while defending," he said.

Australia tour will help us assess where we stand: Harendra

he challenging Australia tour, beginning Saturday, will help Indian women's hockey team assess where it stands, chief coach Harendra Singh said on Friday, adding that they will also experiment with combinations, keeping in mind important future assignments.

The Salima Tete-led Indian team will clash with Australia 'A' in Perth on April 26 and 27, and take on the senior team on May 1, 3 and 4.

Australia have traditionally been strong rivals, winning 10 of the 16 matches played between the two sides, while drawing three.

Harendra is confident that the strenuous month-long training camp in Bengaluru had prepared the team well for the matches.

"The team has trained intensely during the camp in Bengaluru, and this tour will help us assess where we stand," said Harendra, who took over from Dutch Janneke Schopman following her resignation in the aftermath of the team's failure to qualify for the Paris Olympics.

The team will draw inspiration from its recent victory against powerhouse and world number one The Netherlands in the Pro League.

"Our focus is on giving players international exposure, building squad depth, and trying out combinations. Playing against Australia A and the senior Australian team in their home conditions will be a good learning experience and help us prepare for the important competitions coming up this year."

India had a mixed outing in the home leg of the Pro League recently where it registered two wins and a shootout victory against the Dutch, which earned them a bonus point.

With experienced midfielder Salima leading the 26-member squad, that also has prolific goal-scorer Navneet Kaur as her deputy, an interesting contest could be on the cards.

Chopra invited Nadeem, who defeated the Indian in Paris last year to win gold, for the inaugural Neeraj Chopra Classic to be held in Bengaluru on May 24.

"After all that has taken place over the last 48 hours, Arshad's presence at the NC Classic was completely out of the question. My country and its interests will always come first," Chopra, who is a Subedar Major in the Indian Army, said in a lengthy post on 'X'

"To those that are going through the loss of their people, my thoughts and prayers are with you. Along with the entire nation,

I am both hurt and angry at what has taken place," said Chopra.
"I am confident that our country's response will show our strength as a nation and justice will be served," he added.

Nadeem had declined to come citing other commitments. The 27-year-old Chopra said he is well aware of the chatter surrounding his invitation to Nadeem after the Pahalgam attack in which 26 people, mostly tourists, were gunned down by terrorists.

"...most of it has been hate and abuse. They haven't even left my family out of it," said Chopra.

"I usually am a man of few words, but that doesn't mean I will not speak up against what I think is wrong. More so when it comes to questioning my love for our country, and the respect and honour of my family," he wrote.

Chopra said invites for NC Classic were sent out on Monday, a day before the Pahalgam terror attack in which 26 people, mostly tourists, were killed.

"The invitation I extended to Arshad was from one athlete to another -- nothing more, nothing less. The aim of NC Classic was to bring the best athletes to India and for our country to be the home of world-class sporting events.
