Designate Protection Officers To Ensure Safety Of Women From Domestic Abuse: SC To States, UTs

NEW DELHI: The Supreme Court on Tuesday directed all the states and union territories to identify officers in the Department of Women and Child Development at the district and taluka levels and designate them as protection officers.

A protection officer is an appointed individual tasked with ensuring the safety and well-being of victims of domestic violence.

A bench of Justices B V Nagarathna and Satish Chandra Sharma directed the chief secretaries of the states, UTs and the secretaries of the Women and Child/Social Welfare Departments to coordinate and ensure the designation of officers as protection officers under the Domestic Violence Act.

"They shall also take steps to discharge their duties under Section 11 by giving wide publicity through media to promote awareness about the provisions of the Act, ensure effective coordination of services under the Act, and implement its provisions," it said. The bench directed for the exercise to be completed within six weeks from today in areas where protection officers weren't designated.

"The states shall ensure the availability of service providers, help groups, and shelter homes for distressed women. The respondent states shall also identify shelter homes for this purpose," the top court added.

Underlining the right under the Legal Services Authorities Act, the bench ordered the member secretary of National Legal Services Authority to instruct all member secretaries of the state legal services authorities to spread awareness among women about their right to free legal aid and advice under the Domestic Violence Act.

They shall also give adequate publicity to these provisions, the bench said.

"Needless to say, if any woman approaches for legal aid or advice, it shall be provided expeditiously, as the Act guarantees every woman the right to free legal assistance," it noted.

The top court's direction came on a plea filed by NGO We the Women of India seeking to fill massive gaps in infrastructure under Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act across the country for providing effective legal aid to women survivors of abuse at matrimonial homes and creating shelter homes for them post lodging of complaints against husbands and inlaws.

The NGO, in its plea filed through advocate Shobha Gupta, said domestic violence continues to be the most common crime against females in India despite the Domestic Violence Act coming into force more than 15 years.

There was no immediate reaction from the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) or the Adani Group on the claims.

Congress general secretary in-charge of communications, Jairam Ramesh, said the "double-engine" Modani saga

"SEBI has reportedly threatened two Mauritius-based offshore funds controlled by Elara Capital -? Elara India

Opportunities Fund and Vespera Fund –? with penalties and licence cancellations for failing to provide shareholding details," he said on X. Ramesh said, these funds have been accused of "stock their own companies in violation of SEBI rules.

'The two funds have reportedly offered to settle the matter without admitting guilt and paying a token fee, which is the course of action most convenient for Modani," the Congress leader said.

In December 2022, 98.78 per cent of the India Opportunities Fund was invested in three Adani Companies, while in June 2022, 93.9 per cent of Vespera was invested in Adani Enterprises, he said.

"SEBI's actions might appear on the surface to represent progress, but the fact is that the Supreme Court had required this investigation to be completed in two months, but it has dragged on for more than two years. The only people who have benefited from this delay are Modani," Ramesh said.

Nia, Ib Grilling Haryana Youtuber Arrested For Spying For Pakistan: Police

Investigation Agency, Intelligence Bureau and military intelligence officials are questioning Haryana YouTuber Jyoti Malhotra, who has been arrested on charges of spying for Pakistan, police said on Tuesday. A probe into her financial transactions and travel details is also underway, they said.

YouTube channel titled 'Travel with JO', was arrested from the New Aggarsain Extension on May 16.

She was booked under the relevant sections of the Official Secrets Act and the BNS, police said.

Jyoti was among 12 people who have been arrested from Punjab, Haryana and Uttar Pradesh over the past two weeks on charges of espionage, with investigators pointing

> A senior Haryana Police officer in Hisar on Tuesday said the central agencies and military intelligence officials are also probing her travel details, as she had reportedly visited Pakistan, China and some other countries. An attempt is being made to Hisar-based Jyoti (33), who ran a draw a complete chain of events to see which countries she visited and in what sequence, the officer said.

Earlier, police said her known sources of income did not justify her foreign travels, adding that her financial transactions were also under scanner.

A forensic analysis of Jyoti's laptop is underway, police said, adding that they would also question those who were in touch with her.

On Sunday, Hisar SP Shashank

Kumar Sawan said that Pakistani intelligence operatives were developing Ivoti as an "asset".

She was allegedly in touch with a Pakistani official posted in the Pakistan High Commission in Delhi during the four-day military conflict between India and Pakistan that followed the April 22 Pahalgam terror attack, the SP said. Sawan said while Jyoti did not have any direct access to any information related to the military operations, she was directly in touch with Pakistani intelligence operatives (PIOs).

"This is modern warfare that is not just fought on the borders. We came across a new modus operandi wherein PiOs were trying to recruit some social media influencers," the SP said.

Sawan also said Jyoti went to Kashmir before the Pahalgam attack and visited Pakistan before that, adding that police are trying to establish the "links" between these visits.

Jyoti, whose YouTube channel at present has 3.87 lakh subscribers, came in contact with Ehsan-ur-Rahim alias Danish at the Pakistan High Commission in 2023, when she went there seeking a visa to visit the neighbouring country.

On May 13, India expelled the Pakistani official working in the high commission for allegedly indulging in espionage.

Communal politics practised by mainstream parties root cause of all problems: Kejriwal

NEW DELHI: AAP national convener Arvind Keiriwal on Tuesday said Hindu-Muslim politics practised by mainstream parties for the last 75 years is the root cause of all problems in the country.

Speaking at the launch of the party's student the Association of Students for Alternative Politics (ASAP) - here, the former Delhi chief minister accused the current BJP dispensation of destroying the city's education system.

"Our country is grappling with a lot of problems. People do not have food or access to education. Why is this happening? It is because parties like the BJP, the Congress and others have only indulged in politics in the last 75 years," he said.

'These parties are only teaching our school children about Hindu-Muslim... This is the root cause of problems in our country," he said. Talking about the ASAP, he said student cultural groups will be formed in colleges across the country under the forum. Kejriwal said the AAP has proved that elections can be fought with complete honesty.

He also hit out at the BJP-led government in Delhi for the long power cuts in the national capital. "Nowadays, there are three to four hour-long power cuts in Delhi, which did not happen earlier. Within three months, they (BJP) have started ruining the education in Delhi." he said.

In BJP's model money is in hands of select rich, while Cong gives to poor: Rahul Gandhi In their model, if you are ill, you will be

of Opposition in the Lok Sabha, Rahul Gandhi, on Tuesday said that the BJP follows a model under which select rich people get entire money and resources, whereas in the Congress' model, money is put into the bank accounts and the pockets of the poor. The Congress leader was speaking at an event to mark Karnataka Congress Government's two years in office, during which over one lakh title deeds were distributed to eligible beneficiaries, whose "undocumented habitations" have been declared as revenue villages. "Congress party Government has completed two years. During the election, we made you promises. We had promised five guarantees. The BJP people said that Congress party will not be able to fulfill it. The Prime Minister said this won't be done," Gandhi said. Listing out the five guarantee schemes implemented by the Government, he said, "We have told you that we will put money into the bank account of Karnataka's poor. Today, thousands of crores of rupees is being directly put into your bank account. This money, you use for the education of your children, for your health. This is what we wanted – your money comes back to your pocket."

"The BJP wants only to select people to get India's entire money, but we want the money to go to the pockets of poor, backward, dalits, adivasis directly. When we put money into your pockets, that money goes into the market and because of this production increases and money gets injected into villages as you spend this money in your villages and cities and Karnataka's economy benefits from it," he added.

Stating that in the BIP's model, the entire money is given to two-three billionaires, the Congress leader said these billionaires don't spend money in villages or towns, but they buy assets in London, New York and other places. "Your money goes into the hands of a select few under the BJP's model. In their model, employment gets finished, but in our model, employment gets generated.

under debt, in our model, you will have money in your pockets and you will get treated. You will give lakhs of money to private schools, colleges and universities for education under their model and face debt, while in our model we give you money," he added. AICC president Mallikarjun Kharge,

Chief Minister Siddaramaiah, Deputy Chief Minister D K Shivakumar, party general secretary Randeep Singh Surjewala, host of party leaders and ministers were present at the event.

The Congress government's five guarantee schemes are -200 units of free power to all households (Gruha Jyoti), Rs 2,000 monthly assistance to the woman head of every family (Gruha Lakshmi), the additional 5 kg of rice to every member of a BPL household (Anna Bhagya), Rs 3,000 every month for unemployed graduate youth and Rs 1,500 for diploma holders for two years (Yuva Nidhi), and free travel for women in public transport buses (Shakti).

Fake Land Deals in Jammu: Bandipora Court Orders Arrest of Jammu Man in Cheque Bounce case

Accused made people to pay for land earmarked for Regional Science Centre in Jammu

SUHAIL RATHER

BANDIPORA: A local court in Bandipora has issued a non-bailable warrant against Ab Gani Khan, a resident of Chowadi, Jammu, in connection with multiple cheque bounce cases linked to a broader land scam that duped several buyers in the district.

The Judicial Magistrate 1st Class Bandipora, Amandeep Singh, passed the order under Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act after the accused failed to appear before the court in three separate cheque dishonour cases.

The court has directed the Station House Officer (SHO), Sainik Colony, Jammu, to arrest the accused and produce him before the court on or before May 24, 2025.

According to the court order, the warrant has also been forwarded to Senior Superintendent of Police (SSP), Jammu for execution. SSP Jammu has been asked to comply the warrant and a compliance report has been sought in case the arrest is not carried out.

 $The \, directions \, were \, passed \, in \, three \, separate$ cases related to cheque bounce cases filed by three petitioners including-Hilal Ahmad Bhat, Ghulam Ahmad Sheikh and Sheikh Saleem-all residents of Bandipora. The petitioners are being represented by Advocate Shafiq Ahmad Bhat.

The accused fraudster along with a local accomplice Shahnawaz Ahmad Mir of Plan Bandipora was under the scanner for allegedly running an organised land scam that defrauded over a dozen residents of Bandipora district. "After several attempts, the accused gave cheques to three persons (petitioners) after he was pressed to return the money but the cheques bounced as there was no balance in the account," petitioners told Kashmir Convener.

Even after providing fake cheques, the duo allegedly promised to sell land in Chowadi, Jammu, which, as it later turned out, was earmarked for the Regional Science Centre and other developmental projects being taken up by the government.

Victims claimed that they were shown fake land documents and made to believe the deal was genuine. However, when asked to provide proper documentation for legal registration, the accused started dilly-dallying. The matter gained further attention after JK Government in Jammu last year confirmed that 100 kanals of land at Chowadi had been officially identified for the Regional Science Centre, exposing the scam.

Out-of-Pocket Expenditure

The recent data from India's National Health Accounts (NHA) earlier this year reveals a remarkable trend: Out-of-Pocket Expenditure (OOPE) on healthcare is steadily decreasing. This shift is largely attributed to increased government investment in healthcare and the creation of a more accessible and affordable public health infrastructure. Between 2014-15 and 2021-22, government health expenditure (GHE) as a share of GDP rose from 1.13% to 1.84%, while the share of government spending on health grew from 3.94% to 6.12%. These figures highlight a strong commitment to public health, which is reshaping India's healthcare landscape. Key initiatives, such as Ayushman Bharat and various state-level health insurance schemes, have been instrumental in providing coverage to economically vulnerable populations, reducing their reliance on personal savings for medical expenses. Social security expenditure on healthcare also saw a notable increase, protecting individuals from catastrophic healthcare costs that once loomed as major financial threats. The government's focus on enhancing public health infrastructure and workforce development, particularly in rural and underserved regions, further strengthens the availability of services, thereby reducing OOPE. The implications of reduced OOPE extend far beyond financial relief. By making healthcare more affordable, people are encouraged to seek timely medical attention, which translates into better health outcomes. Families, especially those in economically weaker sections, can now allocate resources to essentials beyond healthcare, thus enhancing their financial resilience. The shift toward government-funded healthcare is also creating a stronger healthcare workforce and paving the way for universal health coverage, a long-term goal that aligns with India's vision for an equitable healthcare system. India's healthcare reforms, embodied by reduced OOPE and increasing government investment, mark a transformative shift. This progress lays the foundation for a healthier, financially secure population and brings India closer to a future where healthcare is accessible to all. As the nation continues its journey toward universal health coverage, the promise of affordable and inclusive healthcare stands stronger than

Where Ethics, Journalism, And Content Creation Collide

he lines are blurring. Where traditional journalism ends and content creation begins is no longer a clear border, but a dynamic frontier demanding a new ethical map. As journalists adopt the tools and personas of influencers, and influencers tackle journalistic work, how do the core values of journalism translate to this fluid, fast-paced digital landscape?

At the 2025 International Journalism Festival in Perugia, Italy, journalists-turned-content creators discussed the practical dilemmas faced daily by media innovators trying to deliver credible information, especially to younger audiences who increasingly look beyond legacy outlets. For them, navigating this space means challenging long-held assumptions and establishing new guidelines that are grounded in transparency and rigor.

Prioritizing rigor over labels

In the creator economy, traditional titles seem to carry less weight with audiences than the actual substance of the work. At the Perugia festival, the conversation at the "Journalism ethics in the creator economy era" panel began by addressing the sometimes-uneasy relationship between the terms "journalist" and "influencer."

Sruthi Gottipati, who is building a creator-driven, Gen-Z-focused news startup, SpotOn, argued against getting hung up on labels. "I don't think people care that much about the label," she said. "I use the words 'influencer' and 'creator' interchangeably. What's most important is the kind of work that you're putting out, that has that kind of journalistic rigor that we've been trained in."

She said that core journalistic values — accountability, transparency, truth, fairness — are paramount, regardless of how creators identify themselves. The key is embedding these principles into the content. At SpotOn, she aims to "unlock the value that journalists bring" by training them as creators, while also equipping creators interested in substantive reporting with the rigor of journalism.

Re-evaluating objectivity

The long-held ideal of detached objectivity is also transforming. The panel challenged the traditional notion of journalistic objectivity, suggesting the conversation has evolved.

Kassy Cho, whose outlet, Almost, focuses on global news for young people, explained their decision to move beyond strict neutrality, particularly when covering issues with clear power imbalances. "Journalism is about accountability, and sometimes fairness, accuracy, and transparency in one's approach.

Monetization with integrity

Ethical considerations extend to how this new form of journalism is funded, and here, transparency becomes a necessity. Gottipati debunked the myth that audiences are turned off by sponsored content. In her experience, viewers are savvy and resent be-that had been carefully cultivated there.

Breimer advised creators against platform dependency. "Be smart about your business strategy. Collect email addresses because they can't be taken away from you," she suggested. She also called for solidarity: "I would love to see more coverage of our journalists being in danger on these social platforms, defending when you are neutral and platform both sides, then it can actually lead to harmful narratives," she said, citing climate change reporting and coverage of Gaza as examples. "For us at Almost, we made the editorial decision to call the war on Gaza a genocide in our reporting because that was the truth, that was what we were seeing. Having moral clarity is not harmful, but sometimes neutrality means you being silent and being complicit."

Sanne Breimer, the founder of Inclusive Journalism, added that true objectivity is an illusion. "To think that I am born as an objective human being is just not the way it goes," she said, stressing the importance of "positionality," or recognizing how one's own background shapes perspective.

Admitting that no journalist is truly a blank slate — everyone brings their background and perspective — encourages a more honest relationship with the audience. It shifts the focus from an unattainable objectivity to achievable goals, such as impartiality, ing misled far more than they mind clearly labeled, value-aligned sponsored content. "What they don't like is to be taken for a ride," she said.

Cho's Almost offers an alternative model, funding its journalism by operating a studio that creates content for value-aligned nonprofits and assists them with their communication campaigns. "We don't really see journalism and activism as opposites because journalism at the end of the day is about speaking truth to power," she argued.

Building on borrowed land

Yet, even the most ethical creators operate within ecosystems they don't control. The reliance on platforms like TikTok, Instagram, or X presents a constant vulnerability. Cho shared her experience of having Almost TikTok account repeatedly banned for content deemed problematic by opaque platform rules, often for reporting on Gaza or Syria, despite adhering to journalistic standards. Each ban meant abruptly losing a vital connection to the audience the profession of journalism wherever it unfolds." Learning from creators: Lessons for legacy media

Legacy media has much to learn from the creator space, particularly in terms of audience engagement and transparency. Young audiences, Cho noted, often turn to creators because they feel that traditional media "tends to serve power, not the truth."

Breimer argued the biggest threat to legacy media isn't external disruption, but internal resistance to change. "The biggest threat to legacy media is legacy media," she said, urging established outlets to welcome self-reflection and learn from independent creators. "Embrace the fact that there are journalists out there with fresh ideas doing things on platforms that you may not know a lot about, but you can learn from."

Direwolf Reborn: A Scientific Breakthrough or a Genetic Illusion?

BY RAYEES UL ISLAM

In what has been hailed as a major scientific milestone, the American biotechnology company Colossal Biosciences claims to have brought back an extinct species — the Direwolf, which vanished from Earth some 13,000 years ago. This attempt at de-extinction marks a bold step in genetic science, though it has sparked controversy, ethical questions, and scientific scrutiny.

At first glance, the achievement seems remarkable — the rebirth of a species lost to time. But scientists and critics have cast doubt on the claim, suggesting that these animals may not be "true" Direwolves but rather genetically modified versions of grey wolves with engineered traits.

To understand the roots of this claim, one must trace the Direwolf's history. Fossils of the species were first discovered in 1854 near the Ohio River. Initially classified by American Colossal, co-founded by tech entrepreneur Ben Lamm and renowned geneticist Dr. George Church, has ambitious plans to resurrect long-lost species such as the Tasmanian tiger, the Dodo bird, and the Woolly Mammoth — a species of giant elephant-like creatures that roamed snowy landscapes over 4.000 years ago.

Their first successful effort, according to the company, is the Direwolf—a predator made popular by the TV series Game of Thrones. Inspired by the show, Colossal has named the first two pups Romulus and Remus, and a third female pup born later was christened Khaleesi. The animals were reportedly born through Cesarean section at a secret facility in the United States and are now five months old.

Ancient Beast, New Questions

scientist Joseph Leidy as Canis dirus (meaning "terrifying dog"), the Direwolf was long believed to be a close cousin of the modern grey wolf. However, a groundbreaking study published in Nature in 2021 revealed that Direwolves diverged from the grey wolf lineage around 5.7 million years ago, sharing no genetic overlap and coexisting with coyotes and grey wolves in ancient North America.

So why did the Direwolf vanish while other canines survived? Theories include failure to adapt to climatic shifts, inability to interbreed with other canids, or extinction of their prey. Unlike today's adaptable grey wolves, Direwolves may have been evolutionary specialists — and that specialization might have led to their downfall.

Science Behind the Resurrection

Three primary methods are being explored to "de-extinct" animals:

1. Back-Breeding: This involves selectively breeding animals with traits resembling extinct species. The Quagga Project in Africa used this method to recreate the extinct quagga, a zebra-like animal.

2. Cloning: This technique, perfected with the famous "Dolly the Sheep" in 1996, requires an intact cell nucleus from the extinct species — something that is incredibly rare, making cloning difficult for ancient animals.

3. Genetic Engineering: This is Colossal's chosen method. Using advanced CRISPR gene-editing, scientists extract preserved DNA from fossils — in this case, a Direwolf tooth over 13,000 years old and a 70,000-year-old skull. They then edit the DNA of a close relative — the grey wolf — to reintroduce traits lost to extinction. In the Direwolf project, 14 genes were altered to produce the current pups.

On October 1, 2024, Romulus and Remus were born. Khaleesi followed on January 30, 2025. These pups now live in a high-tech, controlled environment — far removed from the wild terrain their ancestors once ruled.

But this raises a fundamental question: Is this true deextinction or just genetic mimicry?

Ecological Concerns and Ethical Questions

Reviving a species is one thing — reintegrating it into the wild is another. Can these Direwolves play the same ecological role their ancestors once did? Would they even survive outside a laboratory?

Experts warn of potential ecosystem disruptions. The Direwolf was a large apex predator — reintroducing it could lead to competition with existing carnivores like grey wolves or even threaten prey populations. Given that they went extinct naturally, some argue that bringing them back may disturb the current ecological balance rather than restore it.

Dr. Peter Marra of Georgetown University puts it bluntly: "We can't look to recover species that have gone extinct in the past before we conserve species in the present."

And he has a point. The Northern White Rhinoceros, for example, now has only two individuals left. There are over one million plant and animal species on the verge of extinction, according to a 2019 UN report. Should our focus not be on saving endangered species that still have a chance, rather than investing millions in resurrecting lost ones?

The Bigger Picture

The resurrection of the Direwolf reflects our growing ability to manipulate life at a genetic level — a field filled with wonder, promise, and peril. But with such immense power comes immense responsibility.

Are we ready to shape nature with such precision? Can we rebuild not just the bodies of extinct species but their behaviors, instincts, and roles in the environment? Or are we simply building biological replicas — fascinating, but ultimately artificial? As the debate around de-extinction continues, one truth remains: Preventing extinction in the first place is always better than trying to reverse it. As the old saying goes, "Prevention is better than cure."

Experts warn of potential ecosystem disruptions. The Direwolf was a large apex predator — reintroducing it could lead to competition with existing carnivores like grey wolves or even threaten prey populations. Given that they went extinct naturally, some argue that bringing them back may disturb the current ecological balance rather than restore it.

6 Powerful Ways To Boost Your Financial Wellbeing

inancial stress often dominates our lives, especially for women, who are frequently socialised to feel uncertain about money management. We are taught it's impolite to discuss the fine print, but chastised for not knowing enough and not asking more, and it is all to our collective detriment. It has been reported that women are more likely than men to feel "consumed" by money woes (50% versus 44%). In particular, women from underrepresented communities who often support more than just themselves, have an overwhelming pressure and desire to do and be better financially for the many they support and care about. While there is no overnight remedy to many of the practical problems, we have to face in managing our finances, finding peace in the journey and possessing financial understanding is essential.

You're not alone if you feel a long way off from being financially well. Only a third (34%) of women consider themselves financially confident. Interest in "financial wellbeing" has doubled in the past 5 years according to Google trends data, so we know you want to! We hope these 6 strategies can increase the number of women possessing financial wellbeing.

Gaining Financial Wellbeing

Having "Financial Wellbeing" means being in a state that leaves us feeling in control of our finances, whether they are "good" or "not so good". Even when we have far-off seeming goals or growing worries, we are resolute in knowing we have strategies to survive (and hopefully enjoy) the journey to them. In a nutshell, this means possessing financial confidence. With this literacy, and some psychological reframing, we can build a spirit of resilience that enables us to take control of our financial futures. make informed decisions, and work towards a secure foundation for ourselves and our families.

Financial confidence isn't just about knowing the numbers; it's about believing in your ability to make sound financial decisions. Why? A study showed that women are more likely to engage in positive financial behaviours like saving and investing when they have a higher self-efficacy (i.e., confidence in their financial skills)

This is where literacy comes in, and this is where many advisors and financial counsellors recommend starting. After all, another study published in the Journal of Financial Services found that individuals with higher financial literacy experienced higher financial self-efficacy and wellbeing. We agree that there's a knowledge gap here, but in our experience with women, especially those from underrepresented backgrounds, it is more than just a 'knowledge gap'. There is a level of ease and peace-of-mind that comes from regular engagement, interaction, and proximity to a certain theme or world that isn't as widely offered or easily navigable for women.

Confidence doesn't come just from "being better" (i.e. the learning); but the regular doing and knowledge sharing, cultivation, nurturing and simply being more engaged in the wider world that happens alongside the learning.

Here are the 6 strategies to help you achieve financial wellbeing:

1. Macro and Micro Learning
It should be more than just a book or two you read when you're trying to fill that knowledge gap. The best books will speak to you in simple terms, while giving you the tools to understand how others think about finance and budgeting. This way, when you get to complementing your learnings, it doesn't feel like you're starting all over again

Our favourite series that has a title for everyone is The Little Book; which includes "The Little Book that beats the Market". The series is written as a mini dive into an introduction on exactly what the big investors make sound so big and difficult, while explaining and detailing simple suggestions through storytelling to help you get in on the action in smarter and more applicable ways.

To solidify the book's introduction to the world of personal finance management, it would serve you well to complement the reading in the way that suits you best, and turbocharge your confidence along the way. Maybe try 'microlearning' There are an abundance of tools you can use to augment your greater learning with bite-sized exercises and quizzes.

Your Juno is a financial education app designed specifically for women. The app provides bite-sized lessons on various financial topics, including budgeting, investing, and debt management. Your Juno aims to make financial education accessible and engaging, offering interactive content and real-life scenarios to help users understand complex financial concepts. The app also features a community aspect where users can share experiences and seek advice, fostering a supportive environment for learning and growth.

2. Practice makes Perfect

With the foundations formed, practice growing your savings to inspire you in using real money. There are many mock investing platforms, but we like eToro for its complimentary eToro academy that provides the manual to make both your investment decisions and navigate their platform in doing so efficiently.

Use such platforms to practise the art of investing before going into the real deal, to build your understanding and confidence.

3. Stay in The Know

You're already on track here. But keep it up! Regularly reading related content from Amaliah, The Economist and the likes will bolster your familiarity and introduce you to broader topics that give you an edge in navigating the basics.

Had enough of reading? We enjoy listening to Bloomberg News on our morning commute or while getting ready in the morning. Not every phrase or argument will make sense, but the food for thought is not only to seek it out if you're already online. The key here is to not get too absorbed by one view or one opinion but diversify your sources. Some of our favourite financial voices online include

@YoItsDevvie @PenniesToPounds

@DeeperThanMoney4. Find Your Flock

Since you're reading this on Amaliah, you already may have attuned to the power of this strategy. The people we surround ourselves with significantly influence our habits, which includes the financial ones. If you find yourself thrown at the idea of discussing finances openly with your current circle, maybe look to grow a new one.

Platforms and collectives like Bumble BFF or The Stack are spaces you can unabashedly forge new connections centred on your financial interests and goals. If one-to-one feels intimidating, consider joining broader communities online and in person (just a few being Allbright or GLDN). These spaces, though less specific to finance, can be pivoted early on to a

if you really want to. You can create and foster a supportive environment for financial growth for yourself and your loved ones. Being the first to open up and sharing experiences and insights can offer much-needed perspectives to others and foster a sense of solidarity in navigating financial challenges that goes on to be recip-

Is it proving painful staying on top of your budget while being the family designated host? Talk about it. While your near and dear may not have solutions, the sharing is valuable in itself.

tions, the sharing is valuable in itself.
Connection is a key antidote to stress, with research showing a strong network can buffer against the physical and mental health consequences of stress. Individuals who discuss financial matters with friends or family are more likely to feel confident in their financial decisions and report lower levels of financial stress.

This highlights the positive impact of social support on financial wellbeing. Research from the National Endowment for Financial Education also backs this up. Millenial Wealth HQ was born out of a WhatsApp chat of like-minded women who felt like they had nothing but questions. Their questions turned out to be the answers for others.

Don't underestimate the value of connection when it comes to money and investing. Hey, start your own WhatsApp group!

5. Challenge the Conventional For many of us, part of what eats away at our financial wellbeing is the distance from some financial goal or expectation. Whether it's selfimposed, or wrapped in well-meaning advice ("you shouldn't be spending so much on rent!", "enough avocado toast!" anyone?), it can tinge every financial action we take. The worst feelings of financial shame come when we also agree. Maybe you too wish you didn't need that coffee every morning .. but it just makes your commute that much more manageable. Free yourself from the guilt.

We would all be wise to reconsider financial advice with a more critical mindset. It's not about disregarding conventional wisdom entirely, but rather questioning it and seeking alternative perspectives. Perhaps it's getting on the property ladder that's weighing on you? When the average age of a first-time buyer in the UK is 34, and the crisis in supply acknowledged by every popular political party to date: maybe you're not the problem?

Challenging these conventions allows us to reassess our own financial priorities, values, and aspirations, leading to more authentic and fulfilling financial decisions. Besides, "challenging" doesn't mean rejecting. Just think about it a little more.

6. Getting Out of the Financial Freeze

One of my favourite phrases to call on, when I'm wracked with imposter syndrome and self-doubt, is "everyone who is excellent at anything, was once terrible too". We all have to start somewhere, and the most important advice we have to offer is to start. This strategy and sentiment is the key to everything else.

Too often we can fall into a state of "analysis paralysis" or more specifically "financially freeze", when we stall, procrastinate, or literally ignore matters, to prevent having to deal with or take responsibility for a financial decision or situation. So remember:

"Allah does not burden a soul beyond that it can bear..." (Surah Al-Baqarah 2:286)

With patience and perseverance, you can find financial wellbeing.

"Stay safe, stay cool, and stay informed. Together, let's beat the heat," it states.

Meanwhile, doctors urged people to adopt essential precautions to avoid heat-related illnesses as heatwave can lead to heat strokes and people need to take precautions.

Dr Murtaza Hussian, a general physician at DHSK told KNO that current temperatures are "unprecedented" and potentially hazardous if not addressed with preventive care.

"To beat the summer heat, it is important to stay hydrated with plenty of water, electrolytes like ORS, traditional drinks such as lassi, lemonades, and fresh homemade juices," Dr Hussian advised. He warned against the consumption of aerated drinks, packaged juices, and excessive tea or coffee, as they may contribute to dehydration.

Highlighting key safety measures, Dr Murtaza recommended avoiding outdoor exposure during peak heat hours unless absolutely necessary, increasing fluid intake by 1 to 3 litres more than usual, depending on activity levels, Preferring hydrating options like ORS solutions, lassi, chaach (buttermilk), and soups to replenish water and minerals lost through sweat, steering clear of tea. coffee, and carbonated drinks as they increase urination and dehydration, avoiding sugary drinks and packaged juices due to their high caloric content, Wearing light-coloured, loose-fitting clothes instead of dark and tight ones, Using scarves, caps, or umbrellas for protection and applying sunscreen to guard against UV radiation and skin tanning.

Dr Rukhsana Aziz a doctor posted in South Kashmir also stressed the importance of recognizing symptoms of heat-related illness. "People experiencing exhaustion, laziness, weakness, nausea, vomiting, headache, dizziness, mental clouding, or disorientation should immediately visit the nearest health facility," she said.

"Limit physical activities, especially during the hottest parts of the day. Vulnerable groups like children, the elderly, and those with existing medical conditions should be monitored closely," she noted.

Doctors warned that heatstroke, the most severe heat-related illness, can occur when the body's internal temperature regulation system fails due to extreme heat and humidity, leading to a rapid and dangerous rise in body temperature.

As the region grapples with this unexpected heatwave, health professionals are calling for heightened awareness and community action to safeguard lives—(KNO)

However, more than 50 flights were cancelled during this period. Earlier, the flight operations and footfall were low because of the fallout of the deadly Pahalgam incident, where at least 27 people, mostly tourists, were killed, which led to widespread disturbance. But now the flights are back on track, and operations are normalising again.

"The airport operations are working smoothly, and passengers are coming and departing from Srinagar airport without any disturbance, and the Haj movements are also ongoing smoothly," an official from the Srinagar International Airport told KNO.

As per the data, the busiest day was May 17, with 7,841 passengers and 50 scheduled flights. However, 21 of those were cancelled due to reasons not yet known.

"Passengers have been cooperative, and airlines managed alternate schedules wherever possible. We are working closely with all stakeholders to ensure minimal disruptions during this time," the official added.

It is pertinent to mention that the spike in airport activity comes days after the tragic Pahalgam terror attack, where 26 people, mostly tourists, were killed. The incident caused temporary disruption across the valley, including reduced tourist flow and cancellations in travel plans—(KNO)

Shailendra Kumar Gets Addl Charge Of Finance Secretary

JAMMU: In an administrative move, the Jammu and Kashmir Government has assigned additional charge of Administrative Secretary, Finance Department, to 1995 batch AGMUT Cadre IAS officer Shailendra Kumar, who is currently serving as Principal Secretary to the Government in the Agriculture Production Department and also holding charge of the Department of Floriculture, Parks and Gardens.

Imported cherry varieties – from Italy, Bulgaria – fetch premium prices in Kashmir

Jahangeer Ganaie

SRINAGAR: The introduction of imported cherry varieties from Bulgaria and Italy is yielding promising economic returns for Kashmir's cherry growers, even as the region's traditional varieties are yet to be harvested.

Farmers across the valley told the news agency—Kashmir News Observer (KNO) that these early-ripening imported varieties are currently fetching attractive market prices. While traditional varieties like Siyah, which are nearing maturity, are expected to perform well, the main harvest of conventional cultivars remains several weeks away, they said.

Although the imported varieties lack some of the rich crunch, vibrant colour and nutritional qualities of traditional cherries, they possess a crucial advantage: resilience to adverse weather conditions. "Even light rainfall can damage traditional cherries and reduce their market value." said Rashid Ahmad, a grower from Shopian.

He said the Italian and Bulgarian varieties are more tolerant of light and moderate rain and are only vulnerable during heavy downpours, making them a more reliable option in unpredictable weather.

Another benefit, growers said, is the staggered ripening pattern of the new varieties. "Traditional varieties tend to ripen simultaneously, flooding the market and causing supply-demand imbalances," Rashid said. "This often forces growers to sell at lower prices due to their limited shelf life."

The imported varieties ripen gradually in phases, ensuring a steady supply and more stable demand and leading to better profits. Asif Ahmad, another regional grower, said this year, both Siyah and the imported varieties are priced around Rs 100-150 per kilogram. "While these prices are not extraordinarily high, they are profitable, and this year's crop looks promising," he said. The extended harvesting window provided by the new cultivars has also positively impacted employment. "Traditional harvests typically run from mid-June to early July," Asif said. "However, the prolonged ripening period of the imported varieties extends the season to nearly two months, creating more opportunities for both local and migrant labourers."

Basheer Ahmad Basheer, President of the Kashmir Valley Fruit Growers and Dealers Union, told KNO that cherry prices are currently encouraging and that this trend is expected to continue as the peak season approaches. "With the upcoming harvest of traditional varieties and many imported ones, we remain optimistic about sustained demand and favourable prices," he added.

Basheer further said that this year's yield appears promising, boosting hopes for better earnings. "Approximately 80 per cent of cherry production in the valley still comes from traditional varieties, including Makhmali, Siyah, Awal Number, Jadi, Holland, Double, Mishry, Splendor and Steela," he said. "Imported varieties like Italy currently comprise a smaller share but are steadily increasing in influence."

According to official data, Jammu and Kashmir produces over 150,000 metric tonnes of cherries annually, making it the leading cherry-producing region in India. The union territory has more than 2,300 hectares dedicated to cherry cultivation, with Shopian, Ganderbal, and Srinagar as the primary producing districts—(KNO)

Designate Protection Officers To Ensure Women's Safety: SC To States, UTs

NEW DELHI: The Supreme Court on Tuesday directed all the states and union territories to identify officers in the Department of Women and Child Development at the district and taluka levels and designate them as protection officers.

A protection officer is an appointed individual tasked with ensuring the safety and well-being of victims of domestic violence.

A bench of Justices B V Nagarathna and Satish Chandra Sharma directed the chief secretaries of the states, UTs and the secretaries of the Women and Child/Social Welfare Departments to coordinate and ensure the designation of officers as protection officers under the Domestic Violence Act.

"They shall also take steps to discharge their duties under Section 11 by giving wide publicity through media to promote awareness about the provisions of the Act, ensure effective coordination of services under the Act, and implement its provisions," it said. The bench directed for the exercise to be completed within six weeks from today in areas where protection officers weren't designated.

"The states shall ensure the availability of service providers, help groups, and shelter homes for distressed women. The respondent states shall also identify shelter homes for this purpose," the top court added.

Underlining the right under the Legal Services Authorities Act, the bench ordered the member secretary of National Legal Services Authority to instruct all member secretaries of the state legal services authorities to spread awareness among women about their right to free legal aid and advice under the Domestic Violence Act.

They shall also give adequate publicity to these provisions, the bench said.

"Needless to say, if any woman approaches for legal aid or advice, it shall be provided expeditiously, as the Act guarantees every woman the right to free legal assistance," it noted.

The top court's direction came on a plea filed by NGO We the Women of India seeking to fill massive gaps in infrastructure under Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act across the country for providing effective legal aid to women survivors of abuse at matrimonial homes and creating shelter homes for them post lodging of complaints against husbands and inlaws.

The NGO, in its plea filed through advocate Shobha Gupta, said domestic violence continues to be the most common crime against females in India despite the Domestic Violence Act coming into force more than 15 years. (Agencies)

Rishabh Would Be First One To Admit That He Didn"T Have A Good Season, Says Marsh

ishabh Pant couldn't live up to his reputation of being a bonafide match-winner despite his staggering Rs 27 crore billing and the Lucknow Super Giants skipper would be the first one to admit that he didn't have a great IPL season, teammate Mitchell Marsh said after his team's ouster from the cash-rich league.

LSGlost to Sunrisers Hyderabad by six wickets and are now officially out of play-offs race with two more matches left.

Pant, on his part, has scored 134 runs in 12 games and at a strike-rate of below 100 in what has been his worst IPL season since he made his debut for Delhi Capitals in 2016.

"He would be the first one to say that he hasn't had a season that he would have liked, but I know for myself personally that that's the way cricket goes sometimes," Marsh, who has tallied 443 runs so far with five half-centuries told reporters.

Marsh hoped that Pant will turn a corner in the last two games for LSG even though it would count for little in the larger context.

"We know that he's a fantastic player, highly skilled and highly talented, so he will be back, but yeah, hopefully the last two games."

Asked about the positives for the season, Marsh said that the balance sheet could be checked after the end of the 14th league game.

"I think the time for reflection is probably after the season and for me personally just focus on trying to contribute to winning the next two games for our team and for our franchise. Like I said, the IPL is a beast of a tournament and the margins are really small.

Eventually you wake up...and the nightmare gets over: Aakash Chopra on Pant ormer India cricketer Aakash Chopra believes Rishabh Pant will need to reassess his approach in T20 cricket after enduring a "nightmare" IPL season, squandering a vital opportunity to stake a stronger claim for a spot in India's T20 set-up.

Pant, who is not a regular in India's T20 squad, was expected to make a mark this season. However, the Lucknow Super Giants (LSG) skipper managed only 135 runs in 12 matches after being bought for a mammoth Rs 27 crore.

LSG bowed out of the playoff race following their defeat to Sunrisers Hyderabad on Monday night.

"Success might teach you a few things. Failures, however, truly change your mindset—and often for good. He isn't a regular in the Indian T20 side, so this season was crucial. A chance to make a mark, to build a strong unit," Chopra, a former India opener, told 'JioHotstar'.

"It hasn't gone that way. His own form has been inconsistent - another lesson in itself. Does he stick to this approach in Tools on plant?

"When you're in a bad patch, it feels like nothing works. The nights seem longer, the days even more so. That's when you learn -- and bounce back. This has been a nightmare. The good thing about nightmares is that you eventually wake up."

Former India pacer Varun Aaron echoed Chopra's view, saying Pant appeared tentative and must revisit his approach to regain form.

"LSG were relying on him, especially in the middle order. Except Marsh, nobody really scored. Pant looked tentative from the start and never really got going this season. It's a sign of a player out of form," he said.

"A prime Pant would've launched that shot into the stands.
Today, he chipped it straight to the bowler.

"He's a quality player and will wake up. He just needs to adjust his approach slightly. This year, he hasn't scored behind square -- bowlers aren't letting him play those shots..."

LSG have two matches remaining in the league stage -- against Gujarat Titans on May 22 and Royal Challengers Bengaluru on May 27.

MI sign Bairstow, Gleeson and Asalanka as temporary replacements

s reported by ESPNcricinfo earlier, Mumbai Indians (MI) have roped in the England duo of Jonny Bairstow, Richard Gleeson and Charith Asalanka of Sri Lanka as temporary replacements for Will Jacks, Ryan Rickelton and Corbin Bosch.

An IPL statement said that Bairstow will join at a price of INR 5.25 crore while pacer Gleeson was picked at a reserve price of INR 1 crore and Asalanka for INR 75 lakhs.

The replacement players will be available from the playoffs onwards should MI qualify. Currently, MI and Delhi Capitals (DC) are fighting for the last remaining slot in the top four and they play each other in a crucial game on Wednesday. This will also be MI's first match since the IPL resumed on May 17 after it was interrupted due to cross-border tensions between India and Pakistan.

Jacks will not be available after MTs last league game on May 26 owing to his commitment with the national team for ODIs against West Indies, while Rickelton and Bosch will join South Africa for their preparations ahead of the World Test Championship (WTC) final. They will all leave after their final league stage-game against Punjab Kings on May 26.

Bairstow went unsold at November's mega auction, and has not played for England in any format since June 2024. He would travel to India after captaining Yorkshire against Surrey at The Oval in the County Championship this week, and would likely miss one Championship match and two T20 Blast fixtures.

He has made 50 IPL appearances across five seasons, having represented Sunrisers Hyderabad (2019-21) and Punjab Kings (2022 and 2024). He has an impressive record in the league, averaging 34.54 and striking at 144.45, and has scored two IPL hundreds one of them in a record-breaking run chase at Eden Gardens last year.

Gleeson, 37, made his IPL debut last year when he played two matches for Chennai Super Kings (CSK) as a replacement player. He is on a white-ball contract with his county, Warwickshire, and will miss their opening two T20 Blast fixtures.

Asalanka, Sri Lanka's white-ball captain, has never played the IPL before and went unsold at the auction last year. He is the latest batter from Sri Lanka, after Kusal Mendis, to travel to India for IPL.

For MI, Rickelton is currently the team's second-highest run-scorer this season behind Suryakumar Yadav, with 336 runs at 30.54 and a strike rate of 153.42 in his 12 innings while Jacks has also been a mainstay for MI this season, playing 11 of their first 12 league stage games. He has scored 195 runs in nine innings and taken five wickets with his offbreaks.
